Real Life lessons:

How I met the love of my life.

I got married as a young girl at university to a gentleman that I met through door to door evangelism in my first year of university. On the day we first met, my church team and I had been preaching door to door but most people were declining our brief visitation to talk to them about Christ.

This gentleman humbly welcomed us and listened to the gospel without asking sarcastic questions like is usually the case with young people. When we finished talking to him, he did not give his life to Christ but rather he informed us that we can always go back another day and talk to him some more.

This was not the best answer but at-least it was positive. The weekends that followed, we always passed by his house and shared more about the Lord to him. He was always glad to listen in but he never gave us the kind of response we were waiting for. He never accepted Christ as his Lord and Savior.

Gradually we started complaining that maybe he was not worth our time every weekend. Maybe his invitation for us to always pass by his house was just to kill his boredom. Next, we decided to stop going back to his place.

Life continued normally, a year passed by, and then one day; I met this gentleman in a shopping mall. As soon as I saw him, I felt embarrassed because we had simply cut him off without prior notice and neither did we bother to check on him even by simply giving him a phone-call.

FINANCIAL TIP:

If you fear risks then you will never do any kind of business because every business idea has some risks during execution.

What you need then is not to be afraid of risking but rather to take well calculated risks. Some of the ways you can do this are:

1. Understanding the nature of business you are going to invest in.
2. Understanding various ways in which you can mitigate the risk, such that, should something negative happen, the losses will be less.
3. Researching about how the business generally operates such that you can predict the cashflow patterns
4. Do not put everything in the business all at once, no serious business man tests the water with both feet
5. Observe how others are earning from the said business venture and pick their business advice

Real Life lessons:

I tried to pretend like I had not seen him and quickened my steps to get out of the mall. However, taking a glance at him, I realized that he was rushing towards me and I just had to stop and wait for him.

He was visibly very happy to see me. We spoke briefly and he once again invited me to his place. Was he still hoping that I have time to preach to someone who listens to the sermon for weeks but never gives his life to Christ, No! So I said No to his invitation. When he realized that I had declined his home invitation, he offered to invite me to his church. This sounded like great news because if he had a home church then most likely he had given his life to Christ. I agreed to show up the following Sunday. That weekend, true to my promise, I turned up for church where I had been invited. To my surprise, this gentleman was one of the main pastors! He preached in power, correctly quoting all biblical scripture to the dot.

I had never been so puzzled like I was that day! All along the person we hoped did not know anything about Christ was a main pastor in one of the big churches in town! I could not wait to tell the rest of my evangelical team. But then, why had he continued inviting us?!

Later on after the service, I thanked him for having reached out to me at the shopping mall and even invited me for church. "Never mind, I should be the one to thank you, for having accepted my invitation," He said. We exchanged numbers and kept in touch, in one of our conversations, I learnt that the gentleman kept inviting us because he loved me.

"I could not manage to follow you to your hostel and ask for your time so I figured that I could get you to bring yourself to me, it was an added advantage to have your friends around and to meet over discussing scripture. It really helped me to appreciate what a great woman you are even more!" He confessed!

In my last year of university, the gentleman we once tried so hard to forcefully convert proposed to me. It was a very magical moment, we both agreed that we had developed a friendship that was worth graduating to the level of Marriage. We walked down the aisle a few weeks after my graduation.

One thing I learnt from this experience is to never assume too much about situations, it is always better to ask or to leave room for what we may not know. Of course, it is also important not to over-brag about who you are or the milestones you have had because often the people who are quiet maybe at a higher level than you. Lastly, wherever you are, whatever you are doing; people are watching. People you least expect with motives you least expect!

As told by Mrs. Teddy Kimuli (now a pastor's wife).

How LOYAL are you to those who serve you?

The king of a certain community had ten wild dogs that he always used to execute a death sentence to any of his subjects who would do wrong to him. One day, one of his right-hand men gave an opinion which was wrong, and the king didn't like it at all. So, he ordered that he be removed from his current position and instead he is thrown in the dungeon where the King's wild dogs would no doubt tear to pieces whoever was thrown to them to eat. But the right-hand man had one plea to make, "Your majesty! Please give me ten days before throwing me to those cruel wild dogs!" The king granted him his request.

In those ten days, he went to the guard who looks after the wild dogs and told him he would like to serve the dogs for the next ten days. The guard was baffled by the idea from one of the right-hand men of the King but he agreed nevertheless. In the days that followed, the former right-hand man of the King started feeding the dogs, cleaning for them, bathing them and ensuring that they were generally well taken care of and comfortable.

When the ten days elapsed, the king ordered that his former right-hand man be thrown to the wild dogs for his punishment. When he was thrown in, surprisingly, the ravenous dogs were only licking his feet in a friendly way. The king, baffled at what he was seeing, said, "What has happened to my wild dogs?" The servant replied to him, "I served the dogs faithfully for only ten days, they haven't forgotten my service. Yet I served you for a whole ten years and you forgot all about it because of the mistake I made!" The king was very embarrassed, he recognized his mistake right away and announced that his former right-hand man be given back his position with immediate effect and some gifts to appreciate his faithful service.

Do not be quick to forget the good people do for you because of the mistakes they may make sometimes. No one is perfect, you make mistakes too which hurt the people you love and care about.

Sometimes you are not the problem. People may have personal struggles or indifferent character traits; in which case your major role is to find ways to support them. Don't judge yourself for everything going wrong in your relationship, don't judge your spouse either!

My Apologies Mr. Easter!

Dear Mister Easter,
This weekend, your knock at the door again!
Somebody peeping at you through the window,
Excited? But not anymore than for the basket you bring,
Great food, the turkey, Easter eggs and more bling!

Long awaited holiday- no sight of the holy-day in it,
Greedy hands will shake the basket, not the guest,
Many will cruise to church, but not for the church sermon,
Plenty of room for pleasure, no more the treasure!
I caught myself pen-in-hand: this apology letter,
My apologies, Mr. Easter!

Happy Easter Holiday, Christ is Risen!!! Don't forget to focus on the main reason for the season.
